Vote is a weapon in the hands of voter. He can build the Governments with his weapon and can collapse the same. In a democracy, the government is elected by the people who vote in an election: a way for an electorate to elect, i.e., chooses, among several different candidates. It is more than likely that elections will be between two opposing parties. These two will be the most established and most popular parties in the country. For example, in the US, the competition is between the Republicans and the Democrats. In an indirect democracy, voting is the method by which the person elected (in charge) represents the people, whilst making decisions. Direct democracy is the complete opposite; the people make the policy decisions directly without selecting a representative to do it for them.
