

FACULTY FORUM

Introduction

A Faculty Forum at degree colleges is a gathering or platform where faculty members come together to discuss various academic, professional, and institutional topics. These forums often provide an opportunity for teachers, professors, and other academic staff to engage in conversations about topics of current relevance, best practices, pedagogical techniques, curriculum development, research opportunities, and other aspects of teaching and learning. Such forums can be held regularly (monthly, quarterly, or annually) and often lead to important changes within the academic environment. They may be formal, involving presentations and discussions, or more informal, encouraging open dialogue and brainstorming.

Objectives

- To share new teaching methods, technologies, or strategies to enhance student engagement and learning.
- To discuss and evaluate the current curriculum, suggesting changes or new subjects, and brainstorming ways to improve educational outcomes.
- To encourage collaboration between different departments or faculties to enhance cross-disciplinary learning.
